The benefits of high concentrations of EPA and DHA

Research published in the prestigious American Journal of Clinical Nutrition points out that supplementing with Salmon Oil (the richest source of EPA & DHA) keeps blood flowing free, vessels flexible and helps protect people from heart attacks.

But superior heart health isn't all. Numerous studies in peer reviewed publications prove that Omega-3 supplements that are high in EPA and DHA can help people with depression, PMS, arthritis and other inflammations, such as migraines. They're also important during pregnancy, nursing and infancy when a baby's eyes, nerves and brain are developing.

Nearly 100% of the research studies clearly credit all of the phenomenal benefits to the Omega 3 fish oils highest in EPA and DHA. But, when you're dealing with oils you really have to know what you're doing. It's absolutely essential to protect the oils from destruction by air, heat and light. Many companies take any old fish that comes up in the net and squeeze out whatever they can. This usually includes organs high in herbicides, pesticides and heavy metals.

It's important to use only premium edible portions of cold-pressed flesh. An exclusive encapsulation process is necessary to protect the oil from rancidity and oxidation. This prevents toxins and oxidized fats from ending up in the product and guarantees balanced ratios of pure, potent omega-3 oils with all the extraordinary benefits of EPA and DHA.
